SPECIAL TONIGHT

The entire program will be presented by a cast of 100 Patterson Field enlisted men, including the field's "Flying Band," singers, instrumentalists and other entertainers. The inland children's chorus will be presented from the Dayton Art institute by remote control.

It really was the enlisted men's show, however. They sang, played, gave dramatic episode, and whooped it up from the standpoint of applause. A sobering interlude was the pickup of the inland children's chorus of 100 voices singing "The Green Cathedral" from the Dayton Art institute.

Patterson Field Soldiers Really Whoop It Up For "Cheers From The Camps"

By MAXWELL NATHAN

The 3,000 khaki-clad soldiers who jammed one of the Patterson Field hangars last night to witness the "Cheers From The Camps" radio broadcast looked pretty much alike. But from their midst came half a hundred boys whose highly-skilled entertainment talents produced a truly fine program.

Ted Husing, ace sportscaster of the Columbia Broadcasting System, was on hand to serve as a master of ceremonies. But as for talent the Patterson Field boys took care of everything that was important. The hour-long program, which was addressed to the army air forces air service command throughout the world, was sponsored by General Motors corporation.

Maj. Gen. Henry J. F. Miller, chief of the air service command, greeted the 194,000 civilian and soldier personnel of his branch, as well as their families, via the air. Col. M. G. Estabrook, Jr., commanding officer of Patterson Field, read a message from C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors corporation, lauding the war efforts of General Motors employees in Dayton.

It really was the enlisted men's show, however. They sang, played, gave dramatic episodes and whooped it up from the standpoint of applause. A sobering interlude was the pickup of the inland children's chorus of 100 voices singing "The Green Cathedral" from the Dayton Art institute.

Francis' Script Notable

He wasn't up there on the stage, but those of us who know him easily recognized the parts of the script written by Corp. Dale Francis, formerly a member of The Journal editorial staff. Corporal Francis wrote script for the "typical Patterson Field soldier" who was Private, first class, John Harwood. He also wrote the "Soldiers' Creed," a dramatic piece recited by a group of soldiers. At least one joke in the dialogue revealed more of Francis' humor.

Three musical selections heard on the program were written by members of the Patterson Field Flying band, directed by Sgt. Al Cassidy. They were: "The Smile's Half The Battle," by Pvt. Noble Wrather, Detroit; "Lovers Serenade," by Sgt. Bernie Freeman, Dayton, and "Tickets Please," by Corp. Lee Allman, Cincinnati. Arrangements for the orchestra itself were by Allman, Corp. Gene Hilberer and Sgt. Bruno Zabinski.

Ishmael Handles Vocals

Sgt. Vernon Ishamel, Portsmouth, handled the vocals of most of the numbers. A novelty by Pvt. John Allen, Raleigh, N. C., who played the "Sugar Blues" on a comb with the aid of cellophane, was well received. Pvt. Paul Bakeman sang a Little Bit of Heaven with deep tenderness. Sgt. Dick Cull, former Dayton newspaperman, spoke for the USO.

The episodes in the Patterson Field shows were broadcast via recordings taken previously.

But the roar of airplanes zooming just over the hangar roof, heard at the very conclusion of the program, was the real thing. This sound of planes, like others taking off for the air service command's bases throughout the world, was timed to the records.
