February 28, 1954 The Dayton Daily News

TWO MEMBERS of the Inland Children's chorus prepare for today's concerts at the Dayton Art Institute. They are Pat Caulfield and Beverly Hoover. (Photo by Bob Jacobs)

Inland Children To Sing Today At Art Institute

brook, will make two appearances committee of the Chamber of today at the Dayton Art Institute today at the Dayton Art Institute.

Set For March The group was organized in 1936 as a means of interesting children the 10th annual Art Center, Dayin the horizontal for the Dayton Art Institute in March.

Today's program will include March.

consist of advertising material Serenade from Romberg's Student used nationally: Richard F. Howard, director of the Birmingham

The Chocolate Soldier. ard, director of the Birmingham museum, assembled the exhibition of the program. devoted to steel and iron.

THE Inland Children's chorus, p. m. and 4:30 p. m. are sponsored directed by Richard West- by the Art Institute and the mu-

The programs scheduled for 2:30 Jones is accompanist, is made up of 100 children from the families New Exhibits of Inland employes. The singers range in age from eight to 16 in fine music and to contribute to "STEEL, Iron and Men," an exhibition assembled by the and the community at large. Since Birmingham Museum of Art, and then some 1200 children have sung

O Divine Redeemer, by Gounod; The Art Center show features Hear, O My People, by Vittoria, advertising art produced in Day- and a group of light opera exton during the past year. Entries cerpts. In the latter will be the