CENTERVILLE

Park district gets fourth little free library box

The Centerville-Washington Park District is celebrating the addition of the fourth Little Free Library within their park system. A Little Free Library is a collection of books allowing anyone to stop by, pick up a book to read and leave another behind to share. First introduced in Wisconsin, the concept has turned into a worldwide book sharing movement.

The Park District will host a ribbon cutting at Yankee Park on Friday at 5:30 p.m. Bring along a book to share with the library. Representatives from each group involved in this project will be present at the event, and the ceremony will include brief speeches from the Centerville-Washington Park District and the Penbrooke Garden Club. Families will enjoy refreshments, story time, and take home a souvenir. Yankee Park also includes playground equipment; a picnic shelter; a paved multi-use trail; baseball diamonds; and tennis and pickleball courts; and a sand volleyball court. The park is located at 7500 Yankee Street.

Students from a Wright State University MBA project management class volunteered their time and skills to design and build the library.

The Little Free Library will be monitored by the Friends of Washington-Centerville Library to make sure it is always stocked with books. Visit to drop off a book to enjoy and pick up a new one for yourself or your children.

The Park District also has Little Free Libraries at Schoolhouse Park (1875 Nutt Road), Iron Horse Park (6161 Millshire Dr.) and Robert F. Mays Park (10553 Paragon Road). STAFF REPORT
