A precept of the Dayton Chamber of Commerce, for many years, has been:

"Trade and commerce are futile unless the lives of a people be enriched thereby."

For that reason, the Chamber's program emphasizes social, civic, cultural and educational values--all factors which make for "better living in a finer city."

A phase of this activity are the musical events at the Dayton Art Institute, sponsored by the Music Committee of the Chamber.

It would be difficult to find a more appropriate setting for these events than the Dayton Art Institute. Terraced high above the winding Miami River, the Institute is one of Dayton's most beautiful buildings.

A favorite of Daytonians and visitors alike, it is the art treasure trove of Southern Ohio. It has done much to shape the cultural taste of the community.

Daytonians like good music and each year, as a result of the Chamber program, they attend the concert series and other musical events at the Institute. Here Daytonians may gather in peace and amity and enjoy a notable phase of what we are pleased to call the American Way of life.

Inland Chorus Will Present Two Concerts

March 6, 1949
The Dayton Daily News

THE Inland Children's chorus, directed by Richard Westbrook, will be presented in a colorfully staged spring concert today at the Dayton Art Institute. Because of the appeal of the chorus on previous occasions, the program will be given twice—at 2 and at 4 p. m.

The 100-voice chorus, accompanied by Isabel Herbst and Katharine Funkhouser Moore, is made up of children of employes of the Inland division of General Motors. The children range from 6 to 16 and are trained throughout the season by Westbrook.

The children will sing first Singer's arrangement of the Kol Nidre, Adler's Mi Chomocho and a work by Federlein. Their second group will include Curren's Nursery Rhymes, Williams' Song of the Pedlar and the Riff Song from Romberg's Desert Song.

The program is part of the series sponsored by the music and art committee of the Chamber of Commerce.
